Rework is an example of the business-inspirational genre by the founders of 37Signals, a software company. I like 37Signals because they're straightforward, even pithy, and because founder Jason Fried has some right-on things to say about business culture, such as the stupidity of insisting that all workers come to an office and stay for eight hours, whether they are productive there or not.

Rework (2010) throws out the traditional notions of what it takes to run a business and offers a collection of unorthodox advice, ranging from productivity to communication and product development. These lessons are based on the authors' own experiences in building, running and growing their company to a point where it generates millions of dollars in profits annually.
